

Research Internship: Feeding African cities: The role of urban agriculture in improving households' food security, welfare and resilience, 20 weeks.

We welcome applications for internship during 2022-08-29–2023-01-15. Apply before 10 June 2022.

We only accept applications from interns that have an organized internship period, typically through studies at a university or through the Swedish public employment service.

The project is managed by Assem Abu Hatab, Senior Researcher.

Objective of the internship

Research interns at NAI learn from an interdisciplinary environment. Through this internship, the intern will have the opportunity to gain knowledge on the subject area as well as working in a research institution. Under the direction of the project leader, the intern will primarily be focusing on key duties but also get a chance to participate in some institutional activities.

Key duties

1. Conduct a literature review to document existing knowledge and approaches for assessing the impact of urban agriculture on food security and resilience in low- and middle-income countries.
2. Clean and conduct exploratory statistical analysis of datasets in Excel and Stata.
3. Provide other research, writing and editing support for project deliverables.
4. Facilitate communication with the project partners in South Africa and Uganda.
5. Actively participate in planning and organizing two digital meetings.
6. Perform other duties as assigned.

Qualifications and required skills

- MSc degree in economics, rural and development studies, or other fields related to the project theme.
- Familiarity with issues related to food systems and agricultural sectors in African countries is a plus.
- Good quantitative and analytical skills, and ability to use statistical packages and programming languages (e.g. STATA, SPSS, or R) is required.
- Good academic writing skills and very good level of oral and written fluency in English.
- Knowledge in Swedish is meritorious.
- The intern will be supervised by a NAI researcher but should have an ability to work independently.

Any questions regarding the internship can be sent to project manager Assem Abu Hatab (assem.abu-hatab@nai.uu.se) or HR-generalist Dan Åkhagen (dan.akhagen@nai.uu.se).

Apply here (please include info on which internship you are applying for:

https://web103.reachmee.com/ext/I021/1853/job?site=10&lang=UK&validator=9747bb52a4953c2a74b2e472a1745291&job_id=7

Research Internship: Projects on the UN Security Council and its Elected States, 20 weeks.

We welcome applications for internship during 2022-08-29–2023-01-15. Apply before 10 June 2022.

We only accept applications from interns that have an organized internship period, typically through studies at a university or through the Swedish public employment service.

The project is managed by Angela Muvumba Sellström, Senior Researcher.

Objective of the internship

Research interns at NAI learn from an interdisciplinary environment. Through this internship, the intern will have the opportunity to gain knowledge on the subject area as well as working in a research institution. Under the direction of the project leader, the intern will primarily be focusing on key duties but also get a chance to participate in some institutional activities.

Key duties

- Assist in the organization of a UNSC policy workshop with the University of Pretoria (CAS) and an expert webinar series for women's mediation networks, with the Folke Bernadotte Academy
- Carry out background research on conflict and peacekeeping profiles, for future NAI UNSC briefings and publications
- Contribute to one joint research or policy publication and author one individual blog article

Qualifications and required skills

- MSc candidacy in peace and conflict research studies development studies, or other fields related to the project theme.
- Familiarity with issues related to peace and security and gender and conflict issues in African countries is a plus.
- Understanding or interest in working with high-level political and diplomatic representatives.
- Strong organizational and analytical skills.
- Good academic writing skills and very good level of oral and written fluency in English.
- Knowledge in Swedish is meritorious.
- The intern will be supervised by a NAI researcher but should have an ability to work independently.

Any questions regarding the internship can be sent to project manager Angela Muvumba Sellström (angela.muvumba-sellstrom@nai.uu.se) or HR-generalist Dan Åkhagen (dan.akhagen@nai.uu.se).

Apply here (please include info on which internship you are applying for:

https://web103.reachmee.com/ext/I021/1853/job?site=10&lang=UK&validator=9747bb52a4953c2a74b2e472a1745291&job_id=7