

Dawit Yohannes Wondemagegnehu

Dawit Yohannes Wondemagegnehu (PhD) has more than 15 years of experience in policy research, training, program/project management, partnership management and supporting strategic management. Dawit is currently working as an independent research consultant and is completing a field work on a research focusing on migration and violent extremism. He has research experience on a wide range of topics including on the state of African peace and security institutions and processes notably on AMISOM, African mediations and peace support operations, China-Africa relations, inter-organizational cooperation in African peace and security matters. He has special research interest on the IGAD region focusing on various aspects of the conflicts in Darfur, South Sudan, and Somalia as well as in the 2007 election related violence in Kenya. His PhD thesis focused on the AU-UN inter-organizational cooperation in mediation and peacekeeping and was based on an in-depth study of relevant literature and extensive interactions with practitioners. He has a number of publications including a recent journal on African Security Review (ASR) as well as various book chapters and conference papers. Dawit received his PhD in Global Studies from a program jointly run by the University of Leipzig (Germany) and Addis Ababa University.

dawiyohalv@googlemail.com