	East-north-east of Hosaina.
	Elders of the evolving Evangelical church, around 1937, were Abba Gole and Ato Haile Mariam. Sabiro Wesero (see Hosaina : Lambuda) later had his home there and was photographed as an old man in 1998.
	Norman Couser and his wife stayed at Dubancho when they visited the Kembata/Hadiya region for the SIM mission during 3 months at the end of 1944. There was a temporary Bible-school in Dubancho at that time.
	When SIM missionaries resettled in Dubancho, Dr and Mrs Wilson and Miss Warhanik reached there on 13 July 1946. On their first Sunday three hundred and fifty gathered for the service. Abba Gole and the early elders were still in charge of the Kembata Evangelical Church, which by then had about 10,000 members.

Peridotite rocks have been observed. An area with serpentinites has a length of a few kilometres and a width of several hundred metres. Primary occurrences of chromite have been indicated. At least two types of asbestos have been proved by excavations around 1965. The weathered serpentinite shows enrichments of nickel, though the contents are only in the range of 0.5-1.2% of nickel. A small number of chromite pieces occur. [Mineral 1966]

??	dura (O) parrot Dura (river in Gojjam) Prospecting for gold was carried out early in this valley by local inhabitants. [Mineral 1966] /In 1927:/ "Dura River is negro country -- The Abyssinians and Negroes had not quite forgotten their old feuds, and mutual suspicion remained. A few years earlier it was customary for the Abyssinians to make yearly raids for slaves. Ras Hailu, acting on orders from the Central Government, had stopped this -- The rivers in this region are confusing, for there are two Dura rivers /cf Dura Ebelli/ as well as the Dora. -- The Dura basin is mostly forest and is given up to the Negroes, who live down in the bottom; their villages of round thatched huts were clustered round the tops of small hills. -- After the Dura came slightly higher ground occupied mostly by Gallas, who -- occupy land too low to be successfully colonised by men of Amhara stock. -- The Dura ford was easy -- Most of the river-bed was in solid basalt, the ford crossing at a sill of rock which forms a deep pool upstream several hundred yards long, in which big fish could be seen swimming in the clear water. -- We camped by the Dura, and in the evening a negro chief with his band of musicians appeared on a friendly visit -- He said that the last time a European came through this way his father had brought a present of eggs and the European had given him a robe of honour. -- The musical instruments were from four to five feet in length and were made from the narrow part of calabashes joined together. Some were held straight in front of the players and others sideways -- they departed through the forest, lighting their way with torches of dry grass. The blazing fragments that dropped from these set fire to many patches of grass, but as the forest grass had previously been burnt off the flames did not spread far -- The altitude of the Dura was about 4400 feet /1340 m/." ??	Dura After the Emperor had left Belaiya and passed lower Metekel, a camp for the Emperor's party was selected at Dura on 2 March 1941 "by a stream with a waterfall". Haile Selassie moved up there on 4 March, against the intentions of the British in Khartoum. Of forces sent on from Dura on 7 March there were Fitawrari Birru's with 300 mules. (sub post office under Shashemene)
(centre in 1964 of Kedida Gamel Gamela wereda)
The main town for the Kambaata-speaking southwest Gurage.
- 1930s The SIM missionary John Phillips arrived to the Kembata region in February 1933 having been appointed to start a station at Durame. A station was built, and in April 1934 the Phillips's family was well established at the station and Miss Zillah Walsh joined them. On 8 March 1936 the three missionaries were forced to evacuate to the Lambuda station, as the Italian invasion had caused unrest in the area. On 8 May 1936 a civil war was started between the local population and the remaining Amhara, and the station in Durame was soon to be sacked by a mob.
Places around Durame where the SIM missionaries are said to have been preaching were Dato, Megere, Arsho, Mesafe, Kacha, Oshoro and Amburse.
[Grenstedt 2000 p 62]
When SIM had to leave in 1937 because of the Italian occupation, the missionaries had not yet baptised more than about 10 converts, with another about 20 baptised by Ethiopians.
- 1940s When it was possible for the missionaries to return in 1946, they found that the Kambata Evangelical Church had grown to about 10,000 members in the meantime.
[Grenstedt 2000 p 18-19]
The SIM station was not reopened during the 1940s.
- 1950s "In late 1951 it was enthusiastically stated that people around Durame turned to Christ at a rate of 100 per day."
[Grenstedt p 94]
In 1952 Ato Mersha Tesema and Ato Abura Bachore of the Kambata Evangelical Church presented a letter to the Emperor, which contained a list of 65 prisoners. 36 of these were imprisoned in Durame.
In 1953 the SIM station in Durame was reopened, with a new elementary school. In this year a conference of the KEC was held in Durame.
Ralph Jacobson was a missionary at Durame in 1952-1965.
The Bible-school moved from Durame to Hosaina in 1969.
From 1969 the name Kale Hiywot Churches (KHC) began to be used by members of SIM-related churches. Wendiye Oli started writing the history of KHC, and the first volume concerning 1928-41, published in 1998 in Amharic, contains life-stories of several KHC leaders.
Some Ethiopian leaders within KHC or EECMY who at some time within 1960s-1980s lived in Durame were Yacob Baffa, Tesfai Yacob, Ayele Asale, Qes Asfaw Qelbero, Dr Tarekegn Adebe, Dr Teferi Sendabo (the two last-mentioned were later scholars in Sweden).
[Grenstedt 2000 p 32]

1960s	The primary school (in Kembata awraja) in 1968 had 109 boys and 23 girls in grades 1-4, with two teachers. Sudan Interior Mission school had 152 boys and 36 girls in grades 5-6, with 6 male teachers (all Ethiopians).
1980s	There was a post office by then. Swedish EFS missionaries at Durame in 1983-1986 were Pastor Staffan Grenstedt (b 1952) & wife teacher Ingela (b 1953). In 1984 it was possible to sell Bibles openly at the market in Durame, although a little further south, in Sidamo, it was forbidden even to sing Christian hymns at funerals. [Grenstedt 2000] Around 1995 Durame was capital of the Kambata/Alaba/Tembero Zone of the SNNPRS federal entity (Southern Nations).

HBP85	Duss (Dus, Doose) (village)	05/36	[x n]
	A major village of the Karo people, in the region where there are the Mago National Park and the Murle Controlled Hunting Area. [Camerapix 1995]
1980s	The researcher Hiroshi Matsuda spent some months in the village of Dus in 1986. He returned to the region in 1988.
	Dus "had a mixed population of Koegu and Kara. The two groups were closely integrated in a relationship I call annexation, and the name Karo was used as a common designation. While I was there, this relationship broke down amidst conflict. -- Local government officials were concerned about the conflict."
	[H Matsuda in Ethnicity .. 1994 p 50]
	"On 21 February, a Nyangatom war party crossed the Omo at the Kara village of Dus, moved northwards up the east bank of the Omo, turned westwards to cross the Mago and attacked Mursi - mainly women and children - who had sought safety by gathering together in the bush."
	[D Turton in Ethnicity .. 1994 p 25]
	Population about 500 around year 2000.
